

A deferral is a postponement of an expected open due payment.

Deferrals always refer to receivables that have already passed their due dates and have not yet been settled. The aim of a deferral is to overcome short-term liquidity bottlenecks of a borrower and to offset a late payment or possible default. A deferral always involves an adjustment of the contract.