

An expected volume of new business can be defined using balance sheet scenarios. This can be defined for both assets and liabilities and can be spread linearly over any time period. A time period can be specified using absolute or relative data depending on the posting date.